

ACCESSORY BUILDINGS

DETACHED STRUCTURES

Accessory buildings such as garages, sheds, gazebos, etc. which are not physically attached to the home, are treated differently. Please reference the individual zoning requirements before you build the structure. A building permit is required for structures larger than 200 sq. ft. and it is your responsibility to obtain one before construction begins.

There are specific areas where accessory structures may be located. These structures are subject to yard setbacks including, from main structure, side, and rear yards. These setbacks vary from zone to zone.

Height: The height of the building determines how close the building can be to a property line
